Dear Home Secretary

Home Office consultation on strengthening police powers to deal with unauthorised encampments

As organisations committed to enabling more people to enjoy the benefits of nature and the outdoors, we are deeply concerned about government's intention to change trespass rules. The current proposals could have the unintended consequence of deterring people from accessing the countryside, particularly taken alongside the Conservative Party manifesto commitment to criminalising intentional trespass. This needs an urgent rethink.

We believe that government's priority should be to make it easier for people to get outside, enjoy the benefits of walking and connect to the natural environment. Promoting access to the outdoors is a critical part of our response to the climate emergency, poor air quality, high levels of obesity and physical inactivity, and the mental health crisis.

We oppose any measures that would deter people from accessing the outdoors: engaging with nature and enjoying the countryside should not put you at risk of committing a crime. That's why we're writing to seek: 1) urgent clarification on the governments long-term plans around the criminalisation of trespass, and; 2) public commitment not to introduce measures that would limit people's access to and enjoyment of the outdoors, and to working with organisations such as ours to ensure this is not the case.

We look forward to hearing from you.

Yours sincerely,

Tompion Platt, Director of Advocacy & Engagement, The Ramblers
