Liveable City Centres

Belgrave Carr's Factory (1935)

Bede Island (1949)

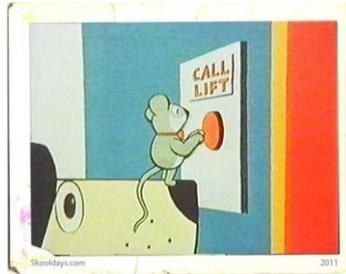

Here's Leicester in 1949, looking a little like the rarely-seen, smoke-clogged, hard-nosed, no-nonsense industrial heart of the island of Sodor. The sort of place where even the Troublesome Trucks are a bit nervy about visiting. The softies. There's Castle Park, all nice and trimmed. And Western Boulevard. And the old London and North Eastern Railway offices, sheds and sidings. And ooh: there's Kirby and West's lovely old tile-fronted art deco dairy too. It's demolished now, of course. Please supply your own glum remark: we think we've got bit of a migraine coming on.
