

Groups set for Glasgow

AHEAD OF the AGM in Glasgow on 10 May, CTC is holding a networking event for CTC volunteers, Member Groups and affiliated clubs. It will take place in the morning at the same venue, Glasgow's Radisson Blu Hotel, and will follow the popular format of previous years.

The morning will start with a seminar – ‘An introduction on how to influence Parliament’ – followed by a series of informal round-table sessions on PR, social media, working with volunteers, and engaging with new members. CTC Councillors will be attending. This is a free event open to CTC members, although you will need to book a place. Contact Sue Cherry on 01483 238302 or email sue.cherry@ctc.org.uk.

All CTC members are welcome to attend the AGM that afternoon. Proof of membership is required. If you wish to vote on the motions at the AGM but will not be there in person, see the separate address sheet that came with this issue of Cycle. For details of the AGM Agenda, turn to page 16.

The CTC National Dinner is also at the Radisson Blu Hotel, and takes place that evening. Tickets are £30 each and must be booked in advance. See the booking form in the Dec-Jan issue or get a copy online: ctc.org.uk/event/ctc-agm-dinner.

For queries about the dinner, contact Sue Cherry (as above).

On Sunday 11 May, there will be a range of guided rides from and around Glasgow. Turn to page 44 for more information.

This issue of Cycle doesn't contain the CTC Annual Report, which is always published prior to the AGM. This follows a special resolution at the AGM in 2012 on the subject of digital communication. Those members who have told CTC that they wish to receive printed copies will be sent them.

Meriden memorial

CTC IS COMMEMORATING the centenary of the First World War with a special podcast. Speaking to the author of ‘The Bicycle in Wartime’, Jim Fitzpatrick, we take a look at the contributions made by cyclists in the Great War. The half-hour podcast also delves into the articles and letters of the CTC Gazette during that time, and we learn about the life of CTC member and WWI war baby, Bert Catchpole, who is 100. Go to the podcast section of iTunes and search for ‘CTC, the national cycling charity’.

The CTC Heart of England Meriden Cycling Rally is staging a special programme of commemorative events. The village green of Meriden, the centre of England (situated between Coventry and Birmingham), is home to the National War Memorial dedicated to cyclists. Both audax and leisure rides are on the programme for Saturday 17 May. In the evening, there's supper and a screening of Alan Bennett's BBC production of ‘A Day Out’ – a story set in the years leading up to the war. The centennial memorial service is on Sunday 18 May at 11am, followed by tea and cake at the Village Hall, where cycling memorabilia will be displayed. For more details, visit ctc-heartofengland.org.uk.

We'd love to hear from you if anyone in your family served in one of the cyclist battalions. We're also looking for help with research into CTC members serving in the Great War. There's no need to be based near CTC in Guildford, but volunteers will need to have web access. Email therese.bjorn@ctc.org.uk

Tourist season starts

THE WINTER BREAK is over: the 2014 CTC Tourist Competition began again in March. Hundreds of CTC members will compete in events across the country to get their first points in this eight-month long competition.

If you haven't entered before, there is something for everyone. The 2014 Tourist Competition calendar boasts 150 events nationwide, so you can easily find rides close to you. The CTC website will let you track your progress – and your competitors' – as you earn points through the season, with live league tables for every class and category, plus event reports, updates, photos and more.

There are competitions for juniors (under 18 on 1st March), women (aged 18-50 on 1st March), men (ditto), and veterans (over 50 on 1st March). And there are six categories of event. Category A rides are 25-79 miles, B rides 80-119 miles, C rides 120-185 miles, and D rides 186 miles and over. There are also special events such as map-reading, treasure hunts, freewheeling competitions, and hill climbs, which all fall under category E. And there are off-road events: category F.

Historically this competition was organised by Bob Kynaston and Mark Draper, but after Bob sadly passed away in 2013, Mark also decided it was time to step down. New organisers Luke Peters and Daniel Moore, our young Volunteer of the Year winners for 2012, have taken over. They have worked on improving the website features and making preparations for the 2014 competition, as well as compiling the provisional results for 2013.

Chester & North Wales dominated again. Peter Dilworth retained overall first place, just in front of fellow Chester & North Wales competitors Lowri Evans and Andy Polakowski. Peter managed the triple too, winning the team trophy and men's veteran class as well. Lowri Evans won the women's and women's veteran classes. Laura Higham of Stevenage & North Herts CTC retained her junior champion title, after putting in a great all-round performance. Her brother Kieran Higham was the best-placed junior boy.

The winners will receive their awards at the CTC National Dinner in Glasgow (see p12). The full listing of 2013 results is online: ctc.org.uk/ctc-tourist-competition. You can find details of Tourist Competition rides there too.

There will be a choice of four rides each day, with optional coach trips to Richmond on the Friday and Goathland and Whitby on the Sunday. Entertainment will be provided each evening.

All the rooms at the college are singles, some suitable for wheelchair users. Camping for tents, caravans, motorhomes and campervans will be on the grassed area close to the accommodation blocks. Camping is on a self-catering basis.

Around 200 campers attend the rally each year. It's an informal event aimed at families, small groups of cyclists, and individuals, based at the UK Youth Activity Centre at Avon Tyrrell Manor near Burley. This year it runs from 25 July-2 August.

The New Forest has many minor roads and tracks, so cycling is enjoyable and safe for all. As well as rides each day, there are adventure facilities on site, and activities will include a children's time trial, swimming, and a barbecue. Visitors can attend for the whole duration or for just a day or two. Camping fees are £8.50 per night per adult, £3.50 per night for children aged 5-17, and it's free for under-5s.
